

Heather Libson lives and works in East London. Trained at Leeds Metropolitan University and with an MA in Fine Art from Chelsea School of Art, she has exhibited her paintings across Britain and is represented in UK collections including Texaco Chevron, The Economist and Rank Xerox. In her paintings, the ephemerality of life and the memory and texture of sensory experience are evoked through layers of transparent colour.

Selected awards:

A T Kearney art award; Villiers David Award; Falkiner Fine Paper Award

Teaching:

Croydon College; Winchester School of Art; Cheltenham and Gloucester College of Higher Education; Leeds Metropolitan University; Belfast University

Education in schools:

With Bow Arts Learning, Libson works as an artist-educator in schools in East London. These residencies, commissions, workshops and teacher mentoring make a significant impact on the cultural and artistic practice in the schools.
